This file features Audiologists. An audiologist is a health-care professional specializing in identifying, diagnosing, treating, and monitoring disorders of the auditory and vestibular systems. Audiologists are trained to diagnose, manage and/or treat hearing, tinnitus, or balance problems. Their most common duty is to certify hearing impairments and prescribe hearing aids for them.

Audiologists may work in a wide variety of settings, including hospitals, clinics, private practices, ENT offices, universities, K-12 schools, government, military, and Veterans' Administration (VA) hospitals. A majority of audiologists are employed in healthcare settings like hospitals and physicians' offices, where they serve different populations and their responsibilities can vary widely. Audiologists in healthcare settings may be responsible for performing hearing assessments, prescribing and fitting hearing aids, assisting in cochlear implant programs, performing ear- or hearing-related surgical monitoring, and/or designing and implementing hearing conservation programs and newborn hearing screening programs. They may also participate as members of balance treatment teams to recommend and carry out treatment and rehabilitation of impairments of vestibular function
